VACANCY

Our company

Polyganics is an innovative medical technology company. We develop, manufacture and commercialize worldwide, innovative bioresorbable devices to facilitate tissue repair and regeneration after surgery. We adapt our versatile polymers for different applications, improving surgical outcome and patient recovery.

The job

You will be our "guide" for medical specialists and the sales reps of our distributors who are starting to work with our products. On the other hand you will gather information from them and in this way obtain input to help us increase the clinical and economical added value of our products.

You will conduct training modules and presentations for doctors, nurses and for the sales reps of our distributors and you will provide clinical product training and assistance. You will also be involved in clinical support on study sites and support surgeons assisting our clinical department. This full-time position demands intensive travelling within Europe and the US.

Your profile

You are a product specialist, preferably with several years experience as surgery assistant or nurse, with a specialism in neurosurgery being a pre. You can train professionals, and have excellent educational skills

You have a Bachelor degree / equivalent education and several years of work experience.

Work experience in the medical device industry is necessary.

You are fluent in English and another European language and maybe also in Dutch.

You have very pleasant and effective social skills.

Our offer

We offer a responsible, independent and challenging position in a growing organization with the opportunity to develop yourself.

Polyganics has a professional but informal working environment, a pleasant work atmosphere and almost 50 enthusiastic colleagues. We offer a competitive salary and secondary benefits.
